

Bruce Sellery - Introduction

Our speaker this (morning/afternoon/evening) has interviewed thousands of CEO's, analysts, and authors in his years as a business journalist.

His topic, "You're On: Capturing the Power of Personal Accountability" is a culmination of his insights from both the media world, and the corporate world where he began his career. It will allow you to think of your role in your organization in a whole new way.

Bruce Sellery is one of the founding members of CTV's Business News Network. He currently hosts "workopolis tv", the network's program all about the world of work. Prior to that he anchored "The Wrap", the key market close program that summarized the trading day. Bruce also spent three years as BNN's New York Bureau Chief where he covered the markets from the Nasdaq Marketsite in Times Square. He was also on the corporate scandal beat, reporting on the trials of Bernie Ebbers and Martha Stewart.

Prior to his move into journalism, Bruce worked in the business world. He was a brand manager at Procter & Gamble, and also led the company's training efforts in the areas of strategy development and Diversity.

In his off time, Bruce is a film buff, a dedicated cottager, and world traveler. Please join me in welcoming Bruce Sellery.
